Emergency Shelters

The Red Cross has designated an emergency shelter for humanitarian relief that was designed by the Department of the Built Environment as the new international standard. Both the large and small versions of the disaster relief tent will be deployed worldwide in providing disaster and emergency assistance. The two models were developed over the course of the past two years in close cooperation with the Red Cross, and they have generated interest from around the world.